

It was the light that enchanted me the most.

*That light that falls
on the rocks and the sea
and makes everything*

seem eternal.

*At night, sitting
in a courtyard,
with the wind bringing salt and distant voices, I felt*

*that I needed
nothing else.*

Penteli - Donousa [Greece]

Bekris Nikolaos
Merchant Navy Officer

They used to gather down at the port, telling stories from their journeys.
Elderly maritime people. Nice guys. Hawaiian shirts, tattoos on their arms, sunglasses—

—wearing all those things they'd be known for.

Talking about reaching faraway ports, with different people; the Caribbean (Kāravaiķes), Cuba, Africa,
India—the whole world. Tasting exotic cuisines, drinks, smokes, and various other things. And the mere of their home, always there with them, but different.

Cool guys.

like their journeys.

Mersini, Donousa

Set course for the southeastern side of Donousa. Head for Mersini, two nautical miles southeast of Stavros.

Hold a course toward the opening of the Karpathian Sea, between the Small Cyclades and Amorgos.

Approach with caution; the coastline is steep and rocky. As you get closer, reduce speed. The water is clear and deep.
